NOTES:

Research use means researchers are allowed to access the interview material within the National Library or in other libraries with which the National Library has loan arrangements for research purposes only. Research use means to listen to, read and take research notes (including quotes), but does not include the right to reproduce or publish any of the interview material.

Personal copies include photocopies, electronic reproductions and audio reproductions (e.g. cassettes, CDs) of the interview material supplied to the researcher for them to retain, but with no further reproduction or dissemination permitted without the permission of the National Library of Australia.

Public use means reproduction of or quoting from the interview material, in full or in part, in a published work, in a broadcast, in a public performance or disclosure in any way and by any media. Any public use permitted is subject to an acknowledgment being made of the interviewee (and in certain cases the interviewer) and the National Library of Australia.
